Daily Pulses Report 10th February 2026

News Highlights

- As per the IMD, India is likely to see largely dry weather across most plains in the coming days, while northern Himalayan states will continue to receive intermittent rainfall and snowfall till February 11. The IMD has also flagged dense fog over parts of the eastern plains and issued a yellow warning for Jammu & Kashmir, alongside a gradual rise in temperatures over northwest and central India.
- India may cut tariffs on select US agri products, including certain pulses, under the India–US interim trade deal, as per a White House fact sheet. However, the Indian government maintains that sensitive commodities, including pulses, remain protected to safeguard farmers’ interests.
- Tur prices witnessed a mixed trend today, with lemon tur strengthening by ₹100 per quintal amid good demand. During the evening session, tur dal prices increased due to improved buying interest, while desi tur prices remained stable.
- Australia’s pulse exports surged in December, with chickpea shipments jumping to 0.59 million MT and lentil exports rising to 0.41 million MT, well above market expectations. Chickpea exports rose 57% m/m, while lentil shipments more than doubled, led by strong buying from India, which alone accounted for 63% of chickpea exports, surprising the market despite existing import tariffs.
- Australia weather: Severe Tropical Cyclone Mitchell (21U) triggered widespread rain and thunderstorms across northern Australia, with weekly totals of 50–150 mm recorded across parts of Queensland, the Northern Territory and northern Western Australia. The heaviest rainfall reached 374 mm at Menavale Alert in Queensland, while lighter showers also affected Tasmania following a passing cold front.
- The United States has issued fresh security guidelines for commercial vessels transiting the Strait of Hormuz amid heightened tensions with Iran, advising U.S.-flagged ships to keep maximum distance from Iranian waters and verbally refuse boarding if challenged. The advisory follows past incidents of vessel seizures, even as U.S.–Iran nuclear talks show early positive signals alongside renewed economic pressure from Washington.
- Global edible oil prices declined, with Malaysian palm oil prices falling by more than 1.5%, while soy oil futures in Chicago also closed on a weaker note. Traders said Bursa Malaysia Derivatives (BMD) crude palm oil futures ended sharply lower on Tuesday, pressured by persistent demand uncertainty across Asian edible oil markets.
